NEWS & UPDATES

PRESIDING OFFICER'S MESSAGE

Are You a Profession-Minded or a Vocation-Minded CPA?

What comes to mind when you think about the difference between a profession and a vocation? Merriam-Webster defines “vocation” as: “the work in which a person is regularly employed” and “the persons engaged in a particular occupation.” In contrast, it describes “profession” as “engaged in learned professions” and “characterized by or conforming to the technical or ethical standards of a profession.”

The definition of “learned” is: “knowledge or skill acquired by instruction or study.” Section 901.005 of the Public Accountancy Act (the Act) states that, “The practice of public accountancy is a learned profession that requires specialized education and experience.” The Act also declares that “the public relies on the competence and integrity of certified public accountants in all of its dealings with certified public accountants and not merely in connection with their performance of the attest service.”

This is a tremendous responsibility to us as certified public accountants (CPAs) because the law that provides for licensure also requires that we be held accountable to the public. It's very easy for us to focus on our own best interests or the needs of our clients, but we need to be aware that our foremost obligation is to the public. This is also true for those of us who work in government or industry, because everything a CPA does has an impact on the public.

“vocation: the work in which a person is regularly employed ... the persons engaged in a particular occupation.”

The Act states, “The terms ‘accountant’ and ‘auditor,’ and derivations, combinations, and abbreviations of those terms, have an implication of competence in the profession of public accountancy on which the public relies in personal, business, and public activities and enterprises.” For instance, if you compile financial statements for an employer the employer may be using those statements to obtain a loan. Similarly, if tax returns are not properly prepared the public could be financially injured.

Passing the exam and obtaining a license does not make one a professional. What makes a professional is an enduring commitment to the highest level of integrity in business and personal life. Living by the code of professional conduct, along with a keen awareness of what being a professional means, distinguishes a profession-minded CPA from a vocation-minded CPA.

“profession: engaged in learned professions ... characterized by or conforming to the technical or ethical standards of a profession.”

Profession-minded CPAs put the interest of the public first and realize that if they have a moral dilemma they should always err on the side of the public, even if that means walking away from clients. The public’s interest should always come first. It should come before the interest of our employer, our clients, and our own personal interests. Members of our profession have a commitment to act with a sense of responsibility to the public and to understand the importance of serving the public.

A profession-minded CPA acquires training and skills through formal education with an ethical disposition to serve the public as a trustee of knowledge. A profession-minded CPA also has the capacity to make good moral decisions to achieve the collective good, i.e., public interest. A vocation-minded CPA is prone to think of his practice in terms of how it benefits him and improves his standard of living. A profession-minded CPA expects and welcomes oversight through rules to protect the credibility of our profession. The public expects CPAs to have the highest level of integrity and our profession is at risk unless CPAs live up to those expectations.

Over the years, I’ve observed that CPAs who are profession-minded whether they are in private industry or public practice, tend to be the most successful. I would encourage all of us to assess how we think about the honor and privilege that has been bestowed on us when we were certified and to ask ourselves if we are practicing accountancy as though we are in a profession or a vocation. Understanding and embracing the traits of a profession-minded CPA will sustain and enhance the credibility of our profession.

Thomas G. Prothro, CPA
TSBPA Presiding Officer

Individual License Fee Increase

Effective October 2014, the fee to renew your CPA license increased by $6 (from $41 to $47). The fee increase applies to individuals that are not retired or disabled. Of the total $257 fee, the Board retains $47 for the day-to-day operations of the Board. For each professional license it issues, the Board is mandated to collect $200 to be deposited into the state's General Revenue Fund for general government operations, as determined by the Texas Legislature, and $10 to be deposited into the fifth-year accounting students' scholarship trust account.

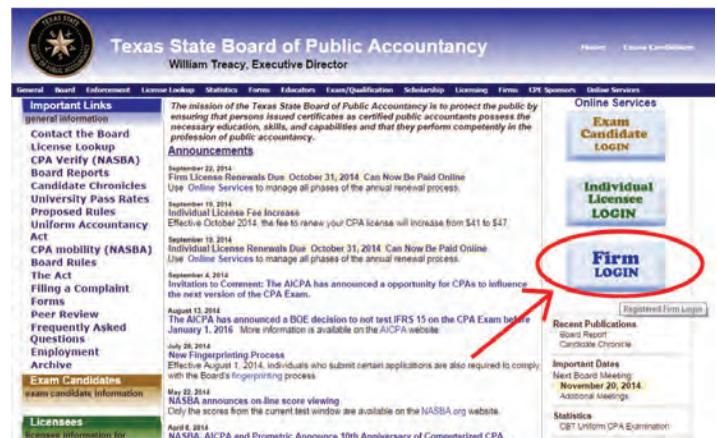

The Board is self-funded. All direct and indirect costs must be paid from what it collects in license renewal fees, firm registrations, exam fees, sponsor registrations, and other collections. Based on projected expenditures and fund balances, the Executive Committee and Board have determined that a fee increase is necessary to maintain the same level of services for Texas licensees that it has historically provided.

Retired CPAs and those with a permanent disability will continue to pay only $10. CPAs who work for certain governmental entities and who are not using their license outside their governmental positions may claim an exemption from the $200 fee, as authorized by the Public Accountancy Act.

Austin Area Volunteers Needed

Foundation Communities is a nonprofit that provides free income tax preparation services for working families in Austin. They are currently looking for more than 600 volunteers in Austin to serve as tax preparers, client liaisons, and Spanish-English translators for the tax season. Foundation Communities will provide volunteers with training in December or January. Continuing professional education credit may be available for the training but not for time spent actually volunteering. To volunteer visit www.foundcom.org and click on "Get involved" or email volunteer@foundcom.org.

Firm License Renewals Can Now Be Paid Online

Firms can now renew and pay for their annual firm license online at www.tsbpa.state.tx.us. Click on "Firm Login" on the right side of the homepage to begin the online firm license renewal process. American Express, Discover, MasterCard, and Visa are accepted. If all requirements are met, a license will be issued the next business day.

Firms can submit their annual license renewal six weeks prior to the due date. The Board will post an announcement on its website on the first day renewals will be accepted for the firms with a given due date. However, firms can notify the Board at any time about organizational changes. For example, firms can submit the following changes online:

- address and contact updates
- date a firm or office dissolved
- information about an office that has just been organized
- main office designation updates
- updates to peer review exemption information
- updates to the list of CPA owners and their capacities, which includes office resident manager designation

The Board is encouraging all firms to login to confirm online access, confirm the accuracy of firm information, and submit any necessary updates. Firms no longer need to wait until submission of the annual license renewal to notify the Board about organizational changes.

Revised Statement on Standards for Accounting and Review Services and Peer Review Standards

The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) voted to approve revised standards for reviews, compilations, and engagements to prepare financial statements at its August 2014 meeting. These standards will be enacted as a new Statement on Standards for Accounting and Review Services (SSARS) number 21. The passage came after a year of exposure to the CPA community that resulted in significant feedback regarding the proposal.

As a result of these new standards, compilations will become a reporting service that is largely unchanged, with the exception that CPAs will have to be engaged to perform a compilation. The revised standards carve out a new preparation service. This will allow CPAs to assist in preparing financial statements for clients without issuing a report.

An engagement letter signed by the accountant and management and the inclusion of a legend on each page of the financial statements that clarifies no assurance is being provided are required to provide preparation services. Documentation should also be retained in sufficient detail to provide a clear understanding of the work performed. However, these are the only requirements and preparation services will not require a determination as to independence.

Financial statements can also be provided to third parties without a report. In the rare circumstance that the CPA is unable to provide an adequate statement on each page of the financial statements, a disclaimer report must be issued. These new standards are effective for periods on or after December 15, 2015 with early implementation permitted. A copy of the original exposure draft is available at the AICPA Peer Review website:

<http://www.aicpa.org/Research/ExposureDrafts/PeerReview/DownloadableDocuments/PR-PFSUSSARS-ImpactPR-ExDraft.pdf>

Simultaneous to the recent issuance of SSARS 21, an exposure draft proposing to exclude the above described preparation services from peer review was also released. The AICPA Peer Review Board (PRB) determined that there are no procedures that can be performed to assess the quality of the report, financial statements, or disclosures as in other engagements currently included in the scope of peer review. If preparation services were to be included in peer review the reviewer would be limited to making sure that a signed engagement letter exists, the no assurance legend is presented on each page, and a disclaimer report (if applicable) has been prepared.

Since that determination, the PRB has received comments on the exposure draft and plans to meet on November 14, 2014 for further discussion. The PRB appears to be leaning toward issuing a new exposure draft that includes preparation services in peer review. If the PRB issues a new exposure draft it would likely be released in mid-November with a comment period ending in early January 2015.

The implications of these pronouncements to Texas CPAs could be significant. The current definition of attest service under the Act includes any engagement required by the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy (the Board) to be performed in accordance with SSARS. This also requires CPA firms providing such services to be enrolled in peer review. The introduction of the new preparation services that are outside of peer review will require the Board to study this issue to ensure that the changes do not result in potential harm to the public interest. The Texas Legislature may decide to amend the Act so Texas law is consistent with the new standards.

Respondent: Laura May Childers Cline
Hometown: Lockhart, TX
Certificate No.: 014861

Respondent never responded to this offer.

Pleadings were filed with the State Office of Administrative Hearings (SOAH) and after notice of hearing, Respondent failed to appear. ## UNAUTHORIZED PRACTICE OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTANCY

Help Us Identify Unlicensed Individuals and Firms Offering Accounting Services

Over the last three years, the Board's Unauthorized Practice of Public Accountancy Program has identified more than 1,700 unlicensed individuals and firms claiming to be CPAs or offering accounting or attest services to the public. Although this program has been very successful, we know that there continues to be false or misleading advertising. There are approximately 70,000 licensed CPAs in Texas who can help protect the public from individuals and firms misrepresenting their qualifications.

If you suspect signage, business cards, letterheads, or other marketing materials that are false or misleading, you may report it by calling 512-305-7866 or email enforcement@tsbpa.state.tx.us.
